SUCCESSFUL APPLICATIONS
CS-201-004	Coochiemudlo Island Coastcare Incorporated	Living on the Edge - A guide for residents of Coochiemudlo Island	Coochiemudlo Island is increasingly popular for living and recreation and needs to maintain a healthy shoreline. The conservation foreshore provides important habitat, buffers waves and currents, stabilises soil and filters stormwater. Its values are increasingly threatened, often unwittingly by misuse. Coastcare believes raising public awareness through the development and publication of a booklet, "Living on the Edge" will assist preservation of our unique environment and its wildlife. We believe highlighting the reasons behind compliance signage will create greater community understanding and adherence to local laws.	$6,103.00
CS-201-006	Conservation Volunteers Australia	Community Action in Conservation: Marine Debris Collection in the Redlands.	CVA will use this grant to undertake beach clean-ups and collect marine debris data along Thompson Esplanade in Victoria Point, Wilson's esplanade, Raby bay foreshore and Wellington Point Beach. Our program will engage the local community and turn their efforts into a valuable resource for research while making a real contribution towards the conservation of Moreton Bay. All collected marine debris is sorted, recorded and the data will be provided to Tangaroa Blue, an international marine debris database that identifies source polluters. CVA will also collect data for the Australian Microplastic Assessment Project (AUSMAP), a national program working towards microplastics research, identifying sources and developing management strategies.	$9,900.00
